Look what they got me writing...

This edition of The Oracle was made possible mainly through the time, efforts, and commitment of our 2026 Editorial Board: Mirabelle, Thomas, Adam, and Firas.

Mirabelle, our whimsical linguistic-cel, thank you for asking critical questions and for prioritizing the quality of this journal. Tom, our night owl with 12 hours of sleep debt, thank you for always checking in and keeping the team on track. You two make it hard to believe you haven't done this before. You're the life of The Oracle!

Adam and Firas, thank you for joining (and saving) the board. The Oracle has benefited especially from your collaboration as PhD students. We're very lucky to have you as friends and supporters, not just of the journal, but of Philosophia too.

The York University Undergraduate Philosophy Conference is, as always, backed and supported by the administrative staff in our Department of Philosophy, and Professor Giudice and Professor Waring, whose enthusiastic support and endorsement has kept us going strong since the conference's resumption.

We're grateful for each and every student that submitted a piece to this edition of The Oracle, and especially for our presenters: Kore, Kyara, Andrew, Mohiz, Parsa, Audrey, and Paloma - we hope this experience was fun and challenging in all the good ways.

This I say all the time, but I hit the jackpot with my team this year. Aside from carrying Philosophia, you (yes... all 15 of you) are easily the most driven, capable, and fun group of people I have gotten to know in my university years. I'm fortunate to be working with you and can't wait to make more great memories together.

Finally, for giving so much to this journal for four long and turbulent years, a huge shout-out goes to Micheal Habib, The Oracle's former Editor-in-Chief and my good friend. I hope you feel fulfilled seeing all this passion for and dedication to The Oracle.

I sure do!

Syeda Gul Zahra
President, Philosophia
